Is it just me? Is this an add on or a whole new OS? I don't remember it being this difficult. You don't have to kill your iPhone or iPad just for an update. Also you don't have to jailbreak it. Windows Phone 8 won't even let you jailbreak it. I'm not going to get into the Android situation. Prism is the same. You can update it. You can install it from the app store or from the official site. Just install the update and restart. If you update it in iTunes, it will update in iOS. If you update it in Android, it will update in Android. Actually - I just went to the App Store for Android and updated it. It was a total piece of crap. And no, you don't have to jailbreak the phone. You don't have to get an unlocked version of the phone. From some point on, most phones (even the iPhone) will stop being able to jailbreak. The iPhone 5 has a new chipset that Apple made sure the jailbreak wouldn't work on. The iPhone 4 doesn't, and the iPhone 3GS doesn't. Not going to get into Android. First of all, if you're going to mention Android, then you're going to have to at least talk about jailbreaking. If you don't know about it, then you won't understand why you're not going to be able to use Prism or iTunes. If you're using Windows Phone 7.8, then it can be jailbroken. But as Windows 8 isn't out yet, I assume you're using Windows 8. Just do a Google search. There are videos of how to jailbreak the iPhone 5, iPhone 4, and the iPhone 3GS. There's a jailbreak for Windows 8. You're really not going to like this, but here's how to upgrade your phone to Windows 8. 1. Get a Windows 8 upgrade disk. 2. Install the Windows 8 upgrade. 3. Reinstall the update to Prism. 4. Restart your phone. 5. Install an app from the Store. If you don't want to upgrade your phone, then use the App Store. In the Market or what have you? When you do a search for Prism, it will show you what 82157476af
